COWARDS

SADIE GOLUB REITERATES HER STORY

"Officers Refused to Let Me Get in the Captain's Life Boat"

Boston Girl Declares She Will Testify Against Conduct of Captain McVey and His Boat Crew in Leaving Her Aboard Sinking Larchmont in Spite of Her Plea to Be Taken With Them.

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., Feb. 15.—In the face of denials made by Captain McVey of the Larchmont that he refused to let Miss Sadie Golub of No. 15 Minot street, Boston, get into his lifeboat as the Larchmont was sinking, that young woman to-day reiterated her charges of cruelty and cowardice against the officers of the vessel.

"The cowards did refuse to let me get into the boat," she declared to-day. "I am not surprised that they deny that they did so. I would be more surprised if men were found who would admit they had been guilty of such cowardice. But guilty they were.

"I will testify in the government's inquiry into the wreck and I will tell the truth, just as I have told it from the start.

Sadie Golub—Wreck Survivor.
Girl who declares that she was barred by officers of Larchmont from entering boat in which they left sinking steamer.

Refused Her Appeal.

"I want the AMERICAN to tell my brother Solomon to tell mamma that I am all right and hope to see them all soon," said Miss Golub. "I want to deny, also, that I ever said an officer of the Larchmont pushed me away from the boat that I tried to get into.

"I do not say positively that anyone pushed me away. It was very dark, but the big man that I asked to help me and save me wore a cap with gold braid on it and a round gold thing in the middle of it.

"I said as I touched him on the side: 'Oh, God, save me.' He didn't say anything, but turned around and jumped into the boat.

"I feel sure that there were not more than seven men in the boat when they pushed away from the steamer, and no women were in it.

"The man I asked to save me was evidently in command of the men who were getting the lifeboat away from the steamer.

"This occurred a very few minutes after the collision. It was on the top deck of the Larchmont.

"The man to whom I spoke paid no attention to me. Neither did any of the other men in the boat. . . . . .

Forsaken by Crew.

"They continued their work of launching the lifeboat.

"An instant or two later they had disappeared over the side into the darkness of the night. I had been forsaken.

"It was a few minutes later that with a wound in the throat which had the appearance of having been made by a knife, Dodge, picked up a body southeast of the island yesterday. It was that of a man about forty years old. His head and face were bruised beyond identification. He had a sandy beard and mustache. He was dressed in a black suit and overcoat. There were tracts in his pocket and he was evidently a member of the Salvation Army.

Bodies Fully Dressed.

Nineteen of the bodies brought here on the Roger Williams were fully dressed, as if all had leaped into the sea at the time of the collision.

Three of the other bodies had only trousers and shirts upon them.

Papers in the pockets of another victim indicated that he was A. L. Cass of 122 Essex street, New York.

In another man's pockets were found letters addressed to Frank Casey, Blackstone, Mass., and ——— Sheridan, Blackstone, Mass. This body was dressed in a mixed undercoat, blue sweater with white buttons. In his pockets were found cards of a brewery and a whiskey house. He wore kid gloves.

It is thought that the man who jumped like an Italian or a Frenchman is Henry Koch, the "Indian" with whom Oliver Janvier worked.

The body of Harry Eckles, a resident of Block Island, will be buried on the island.

The steamer Kentucky brought away forty-nine bodies yesterday, as well as eighteen survivors, one survivor, Maude Gould, of Boston, remaining on the island.

When the second lot of victims arrived only fifteen of the forty-nine bodies brought here the night before remained unclaimed. Including the body buried on Block Island seventy-five have been recovered to date.

The ten passengers are being cared for at the Rhode Island Hospital. They are doing well. At both hospitals the attending physicians are keeping a close watch to prevent gangrene from setting in the frozen limbs.

At the morgue last night one of the most dramatic identifications of the day was made by the sweetheart of John Anson, first pilot on the Larchmont. They were to have been married next month.

For Other News of the Wreck Investigation See Page 4.

BODIES OF WRECK VICTIMS SLOWLY IDENTIFIED

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 15.—At the Monahan morgue last night more of the forty-nine bodies were identified and claimed by friends and relatives. Among the identifications were "Dash" Tait, colored, of Brooklyn, and James Dempsey, known as "Chick," of this city.

One of the bodies identified earlier in the day was that of Koren Korajian, an Armenian, of Jersey City, who was recognized by his brother-in-law, who had come from Jersey City for this purpose, and who had the night before, identified the body of his sister, Mrs. Annie Korajian, Koren's young wife.

The first body claimed yesterday was that of Segord Ean Eisen of No. 49 Third place, Brooklyn, a member of the crew.

Another body was identified as that of Charles Tumasian of No. 357 Central avenue, West Hoboken. The name is not among the list of missing, and is the same as that of Mrs. Korajian's father and brother who visited the morgue, so that there is some doubt as to the correctness of the identification.

The body of a colored man was identified as that of Ezra Geary, a paperhanger.

Two Women Identified.

Later the bodies of two of the few women remaining unidentified were recognized as those of Mrs. Henry Mowry of New London, Ct., and Miss Sadie Michelson, whose body had been identified.

Francisco Spotali of Palermo, Italy, a musician, was identified by Pierre Martines of this city.

One more grim harvest of twenty-four victims of the steamer which the intrepid Block Island fishermen gathered last night in nearby waters was brought here on the tug Roger Williams.

As the death-laden boat left Block Island for Providence still another victim was brought in by the fishing schooner Teresa, making in all seventy-five bodies that have been recovered from the fearful disaster. The Roger Williams returned and took aboard the corpse. It was that of a colored porter of the Larchmont.

Over the head and hanging one arm was a life preserver, while the other arm was free. As the body was landed on the dock of the tug fell back, disclosing

'I'll Be Back in Jury Box Monday'—Bolton

TRIAL WILL GO ON

Thaw Cheered by News and by Lloyds' Insurance of His Life.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Joseph H. Bolton, the member of the jury whose wife died, thus halting the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the slaying of Stanford White, declared to-day that he would be ready to proceed with the case on Monday at 10.30 o'clock, to which time an adjournment was taken yesterday.

This news was carried to Thaw in the Tombs early to-day, and the young man, who had been much depressed for fear that there might be a mistrial, was considerably cheered up. Lawyers on both sides of the remarkable case were confident that the trial would go ahead to its conclusion on Monday.

ARRANGES FOR FUNERAL.

Numerous floral offerings from other members of the jury, friends and several from unknown sources reached the Bolton home at No. 1187 Boston road to-day. Juror Bolton has recovered somewhat from his illness of yesterday following up on announcement of his wife's death, and he aided in making arrangements for the funeral. It has not yet been decided whether it will take place to-morrow or Sunday. The funeral will be from the Presbyterian Church in One Hundred and Sixty-first street, and will be private. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends will be present.

Henry M. Bolton, a brother of the juror, in speaking about the continuance of the trial with his brother in the jury box, said:

"My brother is a man of fortitude and is very conscientious. He will not shirk his duty, however painful it may be to him. If there is a mistrial it will certainly not be because he declared he could not continue in service."

Thaw's lawyers were in a very hopeful and confident mood to-day over the progress of the case so far. They were much interested in the fact just made public that the life of Thaw had been insured and that the company believes that the young man's chances of escaping the death chair are about 10 to 3.

STRANGE THAW INSURANCE.

Lloyd's, the most famous insurance institution in the world, has insured Thaw's life. The agreement of the British company is that if Thaw should be freed the full value of the policy will be paid. The premium charged is at the rate of 30 guineas per cent. (same as $30 on the $100.)

News of the strange insurance just taken out on Harry Thaw's life reached New York to-day. The amount of the policy or the name of the person who sought it has not been divulged, but it marks just one more in the queer list of Lloyd's insurance.

Any risk of any kind will be taken by the great insurance company, which has the headquarters in the Royal Exchange, London. It is more than a mere insurance company, for it keeps its finger on the pulse of the world. The fact that it has insured Thaw is taken as a general indication of the British belief in the justice of his cause and his chance at acquittal.

TO TAKE THAW TO FRANCE.

No confident are the relatives of Thaw that no cell be acquitted that they have already made arrangements to care for him following the trial. They have planned to take him secretly to the south of France, where a cottage or small villa already has been leased, and where the erratic young man will be kept in seclusion.

It was definitely learned to-day that two of the male members of the Thaw family had arranged to secretly take Harry Thaw out of the country as soon as he is liberated, and that they will sail from a port other than New York and on a small and slow steamer.

One of the women members of the Thaw family has confided to a friend the details of the outlays in the South of France. It is on an excellent automobile road and near a charming resort much frequented by quiet, refined, wealthy Europeans. There Thaw and his family hope to have their identity concealed or forgotten until the roof garden tragedy shall have passed into distant history.

EVELYN WANTS OWN HOME.

This is destined to be, providing the prophecies of liberty come true, the first home Harry Thaw will have known since he started on his unruly career. It will be the first home Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will have known since she was a child.

The young woman is tired of hotels and lourding houses and the hap-hazard life she has led, her friends say, and she longs for a home of her own where she will be the supreme mistress.

If Thaw is released, as his relatives profess to be confident of it, he will be accompanied by his young wife, and perhaps by his mother. It is now played that the Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. George L. Carnegie will go to England, and that Mr. Carnegie will remain in this country.

Chances of Acquittal 10 to 3, as Reflected by Rate Charged.

Any risk of any kind will be taken by the great insurance company, which has the headquarters in the Royal Exchange, London. It is more than a mere insurance company, for it keeps its finger on the pulse of the world. The fact that it has insured Thaw is taken as a general indication of the British belief in the justice of his cause and his chance at acquittal.

'GOD'S WILL BE DONE,' THAW JUROR'S CRY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—When Juror Joseph Bolton, who is designated as No. 11 in the jury box at the Thaw trial, interrupted the court proceedings yesterday, summoned to the bedside of his critically ill wife, he went to a house of death. The news that caused the sudden adjournment of court was to the effect that Mrs. Bolton was still alive, but she expired few minutes before her husband reached her bedside in their home at No. 1187 Boston road, the Bronx. The family physician, Dr. Tinker, informed the husband of her death.

At the bedside were the grown son and daughter of the couple, Charles and Amy. Below stairs Juror Harney and a court attendant waited, they having accompanied the venerable juror to his home, one by the court's direction and the other at his own request.

With remarkable fortitude Mr. Bolton bore his bereavement. He merely asked to be left alone with his sorrow and within a few hours orders came from Justice Fitzgerald withdrawing the court attendant and allowing Juror Harney to go to his own home unattended.

For nearly thirty years Mr. and Mrs. Bolton have scarcely once been separated until his selection for jury duty in the Thaw trial, yet he showed no resentment over the fact that his duty as a citizen had prevented his being with his wife continuously during her last illness. His expression, "God's will be done," when told of Dr. Tinker that the end had come, indicated his brave resignation.

BLONDE BEAUTY FROM DIXIE LAND VANDERBILT WHIP IN LONDON SHOW

MISS FLORENCE SCHENCK, WHO IS TO DRIVE VANDERBILT HORSES.

Will Try for Prizes at International Show at London Olympia in June.

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 15.—The mystery surrounding the presence in this city of Miss Florence Schenck of Norfolk, Va., a typical Southern maid, and with a face and figure which have made her noticeable even in this resort of the socially elect, is explained to-day. By her own statement Miss Schenck is here to get acquainted with the valuable show horses of Alfred G. Vanderbilt at Oakland Farm, preparatory to driving professionally for Mr. Vanderbilt in the ladies' classes in which he has entered horses for the International horse show at the London Olympia next June.

There has been quite a little speculation here over the decoy girl from Dixie who is living so quietly at the New Berry House. The principal thing known about her was that she was distinctly a lady, perfectly self-possessed and possessed of consummate skill riding or driving horses.

First Professional Drive.

Newport could see that she was pretty. It learned, whenever any unwarranted questions were ventured, that Miss Schenck was quite mistress of herself. It also saw that she knew horses. Then someone noticed also that she was occasionally seen driving away in the direction of Oakland Farm. That first gave rise to a suspicion that she was interested in the famous Vanderbilt string. At the direct question Miss Schenck with a suggestion of a mischievous pout said in her drawling, Southern voice:

Well, yes, I am to drive professionally for Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt at the Olympia in London next June.

Asked to tell something about herself she said:

My home is in Norfolk, Virginia. My father was the late Dr. Powhatan Schenck. I learned to ride and drive when I was a little bit of a girl on papa's place. Papa was comfortably well off, and we had horses. I just love horses. I have ridden and driven in pleasure horse shows in the South. But this will be my first professional appearance.

Blonde Dixie Beauty.

"Frightened? Not a bit. I know most of the horses already. I go out to Oakland Farm every other day or so. Some horses are being taken out about the farm track and ring for practice. They are beauties, too, the horses, I mean."

A discreet hint was made to the effect that Miss Schenck was quite young to try her skill against some of the veteran men and women whips who will appear at the Olympia show. Miss Schenck smiled and said confidently:

"I'm nineteen years old. And I've been riding or driving almost since I can remember."

So there, now, you Olympia experts.

This Southern girl presents a charming picture. She is a perfect blonde, with blue eyes and yellow hair. She has the delightful manner characteristic of the girl from Dixie. Her features are regular and when she is in animated conversation, her face is one that remains in the memory. So say what photographers and artists would call an excellent posing face.

Occasionally Miss Schenck goes to the local theatre. She knows how to dress to advantage. Usually she wears a large picture hat which serves as an excellent frame for her golden-crowned head.

On the days when she plans to go over to Oakland Farm one of the Vanderbilt teams is sent for her. She whirls away over the road, usually handling the ribbons herself. Then her skilled horsemanship is in evidence.

At the Vanderbilt stables there are twenty-six horses out of the Vanderbilt string which are being put in shape for the trip across the water, and the subsequent appearance on the Olympia arena. Some of the horses are for the ladies' classes. It is these noble brutes in which Miss Schenck is interested.

Shipment February 21.

The horses will be shipped from here Feb. 21. They are to include the celebrated gray road four, Ventura and Viking, wheelers; Vanity and Vogue, leaders; the celebrated park four, all winners at the National Madison Square Garden show. The Major and Sweet Marie, wheelers; Polly Prim and Tom Youngster, leaders; the second park four, Gibson Boy and Full Dress, wheelers; Rustling Silk and Primrose, leaders; two runabout horses, Lady Kathryn and Alec, also winners at the National show; then the ladies' pair, High Boy and Molly Darling, be a son of Manbrino King, two Fenwick coach horses, King Edward and King James, with several others. All these are pure native bred.

In the line of traps there will be two coaches, three phaetons, brougham, two shoabouts, tandem cart, knockabout, private hansom, brougham and victoria for the equipment classes.

The Vanderbilt stable will be in training at the Red Hill Farm at Edgemere, six miles out of London, until the horses show opens.

Takes Mrs. Vanderbilt's Place.

Mr. Vanderbilt, to exhibit in the ladies' classes, must have a feminine whip. Mrs. Vanderbilt has not appeared on the tan bark of late years on account of ill-health. So Mr. Vanderbilt must perforce obtain some woman of requisite skill and suitable appearance to ride and drive his horses for him in these classes. Miss Schenck has the skill, it is understood. She certainly has the "figure" apparently desirable in a show like the Olympia one will be. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Vanderbilt is at Oakland Farm at present. Mr. Vanderbilt is abroad. Mrs. Vanderbilt is in the Adirondacks, where she recently suffered a shock from an accident to her private car. Fortunately she was not injured.

YALE CAMPUS IS STIRRED BY DIVORCE SUIT

Twenty-Seven Named in Freshman's Petition for Marital Freedom.

MARRIED COAT MODEL

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 15.—So many Yale students were present in Superior Court yesterday, when fascinating Josephine Celeste Birney Norton appeared to defend the divorce action brought to her youthful husband, that the place might not have been mistaken for a classroom. Her husband is Edwin Kenneth Norton, son of the millionaire ex-president of the Yin Trust, who lives at No. 173 Riverside Drive, New York.

Rumors that the names of some Yale men would be brought into the suit were responsible for the large attendance. All Yale recalled the sensation of a year ago, when young Norton, a freshman, aged nineteen, eloped with Miss Birney. She was a cloak model and credited with being the prettiest girl in New Haven. The couple went to Bridgeport on the night of January 16, 1906, and were married by a justice of the Peace.

There was a sensation on the campus when it became known that twenty-seven students had been cited to appear in the Norton divorce proceedings, the appearance in court of the pretty, veil-faced, elopement party and Attorney Hadlai Hull is counsel for the former freshman. The latter alleges that he was intoxicated on the night of the elopement.

TELESCOPES TURNED ON NEW SUN SPOT

Harvard Astronomers Join in Study of Latest Solar Phenomenon.

WOULD MAKE 15 EARTHS

Harvard astronomers are to-day carefully studying a great spot which has appeared on the sun, and are wondering if Professor John A. Brashear of the Allegany observatory is right in his contention that the spot was responsible for a phenomenal atmospheric disturbance which occurred in Pittsburg yesterday.

Professor Pickering, head of the Harvard observatory, says that huge spots appear on the sun once every eleven years, and he is not alarmed about it.

The spot, according to the measurements of Professor Brashear, is 118,000 miles long and 20,000 miles wide, covering an area of 3,540,000,000 miles.

Harvard Thinks it Bigger.

The Harvard experts figure the spot as being 116,000 miles in length and 46,000 miles wide.

It covers an area, they say, of 5,330,000 square miles, or is more than fifteen times the area of the earth.

The electric disturbance at Pittsburg yesterday came during a blizzard. There were several peals of loud thunder and a vivid flash of lightning.

Of the disturbance Professor Brashear says:

"The awe-inspiring disturbance was the most remarkable thing I have ever known. In view of the gigantic sun spot, I expected electrical disturbance some time to-day. I thought, however, it would take the form of the aurora borealis, or that telegraphic and telephone communication would be seriously affected. From a scientific standpoint I can say nothing definite regarding it, owing to my inability to see it cause.

Directly Facing the Earth.

"At noon the great sun spot, which is 118,000 miles long and 80,000 miles wide, covering an area of about 3,540,000,000 square miles, was directly facing the earth. This spot is very active.

"Taking these facts into consideration, it is not hard for one to stretch his imagination and connect the cause of to-day's disturbance with the sun spot. Then, again, there is a white line about 140,000 miles long running through the spot, and in my belief this white line is responsible for conditions to-day and any additional phenomena which are very apt to follow."

DEATH OF JUROR'S WIFE BRINGS THAW TRIAL TO DRAMATIC PAUSE

Slayer of Stanford White Fears Recess Till Monday May Mean Mistrial—Members of Jury No Longer Kept as Prisoners.

BY William Hoster

DEATH intervened in the Thaw trial yesterday and brought the proceedings to a sudden halt at one of its most critical stages.

Mrs. Joseph B. Bolton, wife of juror 11, succumbed to pneumonia, from which she had been suffering for three days. Court at once took a recess until 3 o'clock p. m., at which hour Justice Fitzgerald adjourned the trial until Monday morning.

Acting on the suggestion of District Attorney Jerome, the defence consenting, the presiding justice lifted the ban which has kept the jurors sequestered since the beginning of the trial, and permitted them to go to their respective homes under a pledge of honor to read no newspapers or discuss the case in any way.

Juror Bolton, who has been accompanied to his home by Juror Harney and Court Officer Cavanaugh, was left alone with his bereavement, the understanding being that he would report in court on Monday, when it is believed the trial will be resumed.

Whether the trial shall be resumed then, or be declared a mistrial, making it necessary to put the case back on the court calendar, whence it will be taken at some future date and a new jury empaneled, will depend entirely upon the frame of mind of Juror Bolton when he reports on Monday.

No Legal Impediment to Serving to End.

Technically, Mr. Bolton, as a juror, is a sworn officer of the State whose duty cannot be interfered with by any private sadness or bereavement. Its qualifications as a juror having been passed upon before the oath was administered to him, there is no legal impediment to his return to the end, despite the severe blow which has befallen him.

As a matter of plain fact, however, there might be serious reasons why he could not continue to serve. The loss of his wife may have made such an impression on his mind that he will be unable to give the case that attention which the seriousness demands.

Next to Mr. Bolton, the death of Mrs. Bolton fell with greatest force on Harry Thaw. He was stunned by the sudden occurrence and the possibility of a mistrial. Taken back to his cell in the Tombs he gave way to grief, declaring that his young wife was hurriedly sent for in quiet life, as a result of the trial. Thaw was finally brought around to a realization that the delay was unavoidable. He thereupon issued, through his counsel, a statement:

"I am very sorry for Mr. Bolton and sympathize with him deeply," said he. "Naturally, I feel the delay which the death necessitates in my trial more than any one shall hate to make the best of it."

The announcement of Mrs. Bolton's death came in a manner which could not have been dramatically better had it been staged. After two days of fighting Delmas, by making the unimportant and, indeed, really advantageous admission that Thaw was insane during a period of three months after his arrest, had won the right to introduce in evidence the conversations the defendant had with the expert who examined him. This victory will enable the defence to put before the jury, without calling the defendant as a witness, the reasons which he gave for the shooting of Stanford White.

Everyone Felt by Instinct Import of Message.

Delmas had cleared the way, every objection of Jerome had been met, Dr. Evans had already begun his recital—when the sentence was cut in two by Captain Ricketts of the court squad, who hurried upon the bench and whispered into the ear of Justice Fitzgerald.

Mr. Bolton had spent a good part of the night at his wife's bedside, but, believing that she was in safe hands and that his presence was not absolutely necessary, he had rejoined his fellow jurors at the Broadway Central Hotel and proceeded with them to the court house. His face showed signs of anxiety when he took his seat in the box with the other eleven men, but when he answered to his name on the roll call there was the same steadiness that he had displayed when he informed Justice Fitzgerald, through Captain Ricketts, that he believed he would be able to do his full duty.

As the captain hurried to the side of Justice Fitzgerald, Dr. Evans paused abruptly. A sudden hush fell upon the courtroom. Every one realized by instinct that the message had reference to the wife of Juror No. 11. Mr. Bolton, most of all, felt the icy blast that the act of Captain Ricketts sent through the room. His face paled, two great tears stood in his eyes, and he gripped the arms of his chair.

Justice Fitzgerald summoned Jerome and Delmas to the desk. They consulted a minute, and it was seen that all three were laboring under great emotion. Mr. Bolton kept his eyes fixed steadily on the face of Justice Fitzgerald, where he seemed to read the message.

Message Bowed Every Head in Courtroom.

"In consequence of the message which has been handed to me," said the Justice in a choking voice, "I deem it advisable to declare a recess at once until 2 o'clock."

He had not concluded before Mr. Bolton, frail and tottering, his face as white as his hair and moustache, striving vainly to conceal his emotion, was on his feet. He is the oldest member of the jury, and his sweetness, gentility and old-fashioned manner had endeared him to every man in the box. Juror Harney, himself white-haired, choked down a sob and rose to support Mr. Bolton.

Harry Thaw turned his head away, and practically every head in the court room was bowed. A new stillness came over the chamber, and amid it the solemn voice of Justice Fitzgerald was heard excusing Mr. Bolton, who, he intimated, was needed in another place at once.

Mr. Bolton and Mr. Harney led the other jurors out of the court room. The former's hat and coat were handed quickly to him, and, still accompanied by Mr. Harney and Court Officer Cavanaugh, he hastened to his home at No. 1,187 Boston road.

Justice Fitzgerald immediately adjourned the court.

Mr. Bolton reached his home five minutes after his wife had passed away. She had been unconscious for several hours, from which condition she passed painlessly to death. Mr. Bolton's son and daughter, both of whom are married, were with her when she died.

Air of Gloom When Court Reassembled.

Husband and wife had been married for many years and were devoted to each other. His enforced absence on jury service was the first time they had been separated for ten years. A week ago Mrs. Bolton suffered from an attack of the grip. She visited her husband at the Broadway Central Hotel on Saturday night, and in her weakened condition caught fresh cold, which rapidly developed into double pneumonia.

When court reassembled at 2 o'clock there was a distinct air of gloom hanging over the chamber. Jerome was early informed the court of the death of the juror's wife; and there upon pointed out the inhumanity that would stamp the continuance of the trial now on Mr. Bolton, and the injustice that would be done the remaining members of the jury if they were kept sequestered. Delmas, speaking for himself and counsel for the defendant, he moved that the ban be lifted from the jurors so that they be permitted to separate and go to their homes.

Harrridge, in a low tone, agreed with the suggestion, and Justice Fitzgerald explained the situation to the jurors and with an admonition to the effect that they must talk about the case, and placing them on their honor not to discuss the newspapers, excused them until Monday at 10:30.

"Then," said he, "the case will be resumed."

Jerome Has Letters Written By Evelyn to White.

It had been expected that the fight for the admission of the Thaw will would be precipitated at yesterday's session. Notwithstanding the reports of Wednesday night, Jerome has decided to object to this will, on the ground that it has not been legally proven, and he will make a strong fight to keep it from the jury. Delmas, nevertheless, believes that he can have it admitted.

Jerome, it is announced, has evidence refuting the testimony given by Benjamin Bowman that Stanford White, on Christmas eve, in 1905, threatened the life of Harry Thaw. And there is a strong presumption that the District Attorney has in his possession a series of letters written by Evelyn Nesbit to Stanford White which it will make use of in his cross-examination of young Mrs. Thaw.

It seems that Stanford White had a standing order with his secretary that, in the event of his (White's) death, all letters were to be destroyed. The circumstances of White's death, however, caused the secretary to disregard this order, and a number of letters said to have been received by the architect from Evelyn Nesbit were rescued and handed over to the district attorney. About the criminal Court's building yesterday it was rumored that these letters would be very valuable ammunition in his cross examination of the wife of the defendant.

Amazing Revelations by Mazie Follette Reported.

Between now and Monday Jerome will give his attention to the preparation of his lines of attack on Mrs. Thaw's story. He has to aid him the statements of Mrs. Holman, Evelyn's mother; Mazie Follette and Howard Nesbit.

Miss Follette's statement is said to contain some amazing revelations. It purports to include confidences reposed in her by Evelyn Thaw, in which Stanford White figured as a guardian angel instead of the demon Mrs. Thaw pictured him on the witness stand.

It is believed probable that by making this statement Miss Follette has saved herself from going on the witness stand. It is not believed that Jerome would call Howard Nesbit, if he could.

Thaw himself said to his counsel yesterday that he feared a mistrial as much on his wife's account as on his own.

"It would be terrible for her to have to go all over that story again before all those people," said he.

Admission of Conversations In Tombs a Triumph.

With the resumption of the trial, the conversations in the Tombs will have an important bearing on the issue to make. It will be recalled that Jerome had them barred out when they were first offered. He contended that statements made could be received after the commission of the crime were not good evidence in favor of the defendant in a mentally unsound condition. Delmas, however, began to taper off at the fourth visit.

The ingenuity of the admission forced from Jerome will be instantly perceived. It is much more reasonable to believe that Thaw, a lunatic, continued his visits for months after the shooting of White, when he gradually seemed to a sane state, than that he became insane immediately after the shots had been fired. Add to this the fact that the admission enables the examination of Thaw as to his reasons for the shooting to get before the jury, and the total value of Delmas's maneuvering becomes apparent.

It was at this stage that the taking of testimony began yesterday. Dr. Evans, recalled, was asked by Delmas:

"You have heretofore stated in some instance that upon the first three visits that you made to Mr. Thaw, and to which you have testified at length, you formed an opinion as to his mental condition based in part upon his oral statements made to you during these visits?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were the oral statements made to you to any extent by Mr. Thaw at the time necessary to enable you, as a scientific man, to form an opinion as to his mental condition?"

"Yes."

"Can you form a scientifically reliable opinion of the then mental condition of Mr. Thaw without those oral statements on his part?

Had Just Begun Story When Interrupted.

"Not in justice to him and myself."

"Then you will proceed, doctor, to state what these oral statements were."

"May I make an explanation?" asked Dr. Evans.

"There are observations with my other observations, which I wanted to get clear somewhat before I started in. To make a plain statement without any association with what was done, how I moved, how he moved, what he said and how he acted, would put me at a disadvantage?"

"There is no objection, doctor, to stating it," said Delmas.

"Oh, let him tell everything," cried Jerome.

"There is no objection to stating it in your own way, so no ordinary rule would do," Delmas said.

In a dreadful voice Mr. Evans began:

"In August I went to the Tombs, according to my recollection, I took a note of introduction from Mr. Harrridge to Mr. Thaw. After some delay——"

He had got just that far when Captain Ricketts suddenly hurried into the court room and whispered the message to Justice Fitzgerald which brought the proceedings to an end.

POSTMASTER BLAMES B. & A.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 15.—In answer to many complaints regarding delay in the delivery of letters Postmaster Hyde places most of the blame on the Boston & Albany Railroad.

He says the mail trains have been continually arriving in this city from one to five hours late, and the postoffice officials have given up hope of having the mail of delivering it on schedule time.

DOCTOR TELLS HOW TO KEEP WELL AT 77

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Physiological Institute two particularly interesting lectures are to be delivered soon in Potter Hall, No. 177 Huntington avenue, on February 21 at 2:30 p. m., "The Brain Mathematically Considered, or How to Keep Well and Have a Good Memory at Seventy-seven," by Dr. Helen Hartley, and on March 7, "Christ of the Andes," with stereopticon views by Senorita Caroline Huidobro.

A Poor Cook.

Alfred the Great, of England, having been defeated by the Danes, took refuge in a farmer's hut. The wife, unaware that it was the King, ordered him to watch, to her absence, some cakes on the fire. When she returned and found the cakes burnt, she scolded her guest in round terms, although it was only his neglect of duty. Some people are always blaming others for their own neglect. If you are suffering with disease and do not take Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound, you are guilty of an unpardonable neglect, which in course of time will demand a reckoning. It is intended as a cure for diseases with the following symptoms: Pains to the side, back and under the shoulder blade, sour, sick and bloated stomach, loss of appetite, headaches, feel sleepy in the morning, constipation, sleeplessness and loss of memory. It thoroughly cleanses the blood and will overcome malaria, chills and fevers, and impurities of the organs of digestion and nutrition generally. 30 days' treatment, 25c. 150 druggists.

BLAME LARCHMONT IN PROBE OF WRECK

KNOWLTON'S CAPTAIN AND CREW ON STAND SAY THEY PURSUED PROPER COURSE.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW LONDON, Feb. 15.—An interesting feature in the investigation now being made by the United States authorities to discover the cause of the Larchmont disaster is the attempt to identify a ship which steamed away from the wreck without giving aid.

Captain Haley of the schooner Knowlton charges the captain of this unknown steamer with a lack of attention and common humanity in not coming to the assistance of the wrecked steamer, when they knew she was in distress.

Captain Saw Ship Steam Away.

Captain Haley's story is that an unknown steamer was in the vicinity of the disaster, and after showing her lights to the schooner's crew, veered off and kept on her course. Had the steamer remained by the sinking Larchmont, many of those who went down with the ill-fated vessel would have been saved. The captain in his sworn statement to Captain William E. Withey, local inspector, says:

"I looked off to the southward and saw a steamer showing a red and green light, and it looked as if she was coming to as to take us off. Then she kept off and showed her green light and went on."

If the unknown ship was a Sound boat, plying between Eastern ports and New York, she may be identified and her officers questioned.

Captain Haley's story indicates that the unknown steamer was bound to the westward. The Knowlton was headed in an easterly direction, and Captain Haley looked to the southward. The unknown steamer first showed both her red and green lights, then her green, or starboard, light, indicating that she was passing to the westward and by the crippled Larchmont and schooner. The local steamboat inspectors point out that it would be well nigh impossible for anyone in the pilot house of a steamer within a few miles of the wreck to have missed seeing the Larchmont, particularly as it was an unusually clear night and the lights of passenger craft could be seen for miles.

Knowlton Crew Testifies.

Four members of the crew of the schooner Harry Knowlton were examined yesterday by United States Steamboat Inspectors William H. Withey and John Stewart. They were: Captain Frank T. Haley of Everett, Mass.; Mate Frank Govand of St. John, N. B.; Seaman Carl V. Johnson of Christiana, Norway, and Julius Bergensen of Sweden.

The Knowlton's side of the story only was given yesterday because of the illness of Captain McVey, who was unable to attend this hearing. The testimony of those on the Larchmont will be taken later.

Captain Haley, the first witness, testified that the weather was fine on the night of the accident and that ship lights could be seen two miles away.

"We were steering a straight course toward Point Judith light and did not deviate a hair, up to the very moment the Larchmont swooped down upon us," said Captain Haley.

The witnesses agreed on every point in their testimony. Their story was in effect as follows: After passing Race Rock the Knowlton's course was changed west by north. The wind was blowing with a velocity of thirty-five miles an hour. The Knowlton was proceeding at a rate of ten miles an hour. The time was about 9 o'clock. Between Fishers Island and Watch Hill the wind freshened and the schooner increased her speed.

Saw Green Light on Bow.

The schooner was bowling along when the lookout, Bergensen, and the mate saw the green and low lights of the Larchmont glimmering about a mile down Block Island sound slowly but steadily veering toward the sailing vessel.

"Green light on lee bow," reported the lookout to Mate Govand, and the mate responded by ordering the wheelsman, Carl Johnson, to "steer on her course." "She is on her course," replied Johnson, who had relieved Bergensen at the wheel.

When the green signal of the Larchmont drew nearer and suddenly changed to red, Mate Govand became alarmed, and calling Captain Haley from his bunk informed him of the steamer's peculiar actions, and he remarked: "She will pass clear us."

"Keep her on a straight course," was Captain Haley's admonition to the wheelsman, and standing beside the latter, the Larchmont could be discerned approaching rapidly at a distance estimated by the schooner's captain to be but 150 yards distant.

The statements of all the crew agree precisely as to what happened in the next few moments.

The Larchmont's bow had cleared the Knowlton when the schooner struck the big steamer in the galley, and there was an avalanche of pots, kettles, dishes and miscellaneous food stuffs about the schooner's decks.

The Larchmont passed on but no one aboard the schooner could tell whether the paddle wheels made a single revolution after the terrific impact, for a cloud of steam enveloped the Larchmont and she seemed to vanish in the night.

No Sound from Larchmont.

Not a cry or sound of any kind whatever was heard from the doomed steamer in the few minutes she remained afloat.

No signs of life-boats of rafts were noticeable on the water after she went down.

Captain Haley says it would have been all up with him and his crew if the Quonchontaug life-savers had not luckily been on hand when they landed, encased in ice, on the Rhode Island shore.

The Knowlton, after sailing erratically to and down the waters of Block Island sound, finally drifted ashore first on the beach close to the Quonochontaug station.

CAPTAIN M'VEY WAS UNABLE TO ATTEND THE INVESTIGATION

Special to the Boston American.

NEW LONDON, Ct., Feb. 15.—The official telegram sent to Captain McVey of the Larchmont to appear in this city and testify before the United States officials is as follows:

"Make official report of the loss of the Larchmont to United States local inspectors at New London immediately. (Signed) CAPTAIN SMITHEY."

This telegram was sent the day following the disaster, and to both the New York and Providence offices of the Joy Line. A reply to this telegram was received by Captain Withey yesterday, signed by Purser Oscar Young of the Larchmont, saying that Captain McVey was at present physically incapacitated. The telegram did not state when Captain McVey would be able to comply with the official order.

Official reports of this and the investigation held yesterday have been forwarded to Washington.

Captain Withey has secured a statement from Captain Howard Wilcox of the Quonchontaug station, who said that never since he has been located at the station had there been a clearer night than that on which the collision occurred. He could plainly see the light on Little Gull Island, which is over nineteen nautical miles away and is only of the second order.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 15.—Dr. Leroy Fisher, attending Captain McVey in Providence, was interviewed by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter yesterday as to the captain's mental condition. "In fact, true, Doctor, as reported, that Captain McVey was temporarily out of his mind as a result of the wreck of the Larchmont," asked the reporter.

"I have heard that story before," answered the doctor. "There is not a word of truth in it. The captain is feeling fine, although his hands are frostbitten. When I left him he was laughing and playing with his children. Mrs. McVey confirmed the statement that her husband was not suffering a great deal, but said he wanted to be quiet, and he has refused to be further interviewed.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 15.—Samuel Lacombe, aged twenty-one, of Bedford, N. H., one of the nineteen survivors from the steamer Larchmont taken to the Rhode Island Hospital from the steamer Kentucky, died last night.

Lacombe's condition was considered very serious when he was removed from Block Island, but it was considered best to bring him here, that he might obtain better medical treatment. Both hands and feet were badly frozen.

He regained consciousness, and thereafter suffered the most excruciating pain. Some hours before his death it became evident that he could not survive, as his heart had been greatly weakened by the suffering through which he had passed.

Are Patent Medicines Frauds?

We are often asked the above question, and our answer has invariably been that no medicine that gives satisfactory results could be fraudulent. We could not afford to sell fraudulent medicines. Our business depends on pleased customers—in fact any business does. Therefore, we would take an enormous risk did we not fulfil every promise made our customers. We are very careful of what we guarantee, and when we do guarantee an article we must know it pretty well—what it contains and how it is made. We have in mind the Rexall line of remedies, particularly Rexall Mucu-Tone, of which we are selling large quantities at this time of the year. Mucu-Tone is one article that we can recommend over our counter and know that ninety-eight per cent. of its purchasers are going to be benefited and will return to our store pleased customers. Mucu-Tone is a positive cure for internal scrofula or what is commonly called Catarrh. It is without a doubt the peer of all tonics for any one who is suffering from a run-down condition, can't work, feels constantly tired or suffering from the more plainly described symptoms of Catarrh—such as stopping of the nose, cold in the head or bad cough."

It must be remembered that Catarrh is not confined to the nose and throat. It usually starts there, but it leads more often to serious trouble, particularly the wasting of tissues, as in the case of little Miss Dillon, of Albany. Here is a letter from her father:

"My little girl had catarrh so badly that the disease had begun to eat into the cartilage of the nose. Snuffs and instruments failed to do more than give temporary relief. I saw the advertisements of Rexall Mucu-Tone, but I could not believe that anything taken in the stomach could cure the sore membranes of the nose. However, I took advantage of your free trial offer and my girl began taking your remedy according to directions. I want to say right here that Mucu-Tone is certainly the greatest medical discovery of the times, and to thank you for the liberal offer that first induced me to give it a trial. Muco-Tone has cured my daughter's, catarrh completely. The discharge has stopped altogether, and her breath is as sweet as can be. Again thanking you, Mrs. T. Dillon, 24 N. Swan St., Albany, N. Y."

We are selling a large trial bottle of Mucu-Tone for fifty cents on the famous Rexall guarantee of your money back if you are not satisfied. We promise that one bottle will put flesh on your bones and bring new vitality to your system.

A REASON

The United Drug Company, manufacturers of the Rexall Remedies, for whose preparations we are agents in this city, make 200 remedies, one for each ill. Each one is especially prepared to cure one disease, and that only. This is an age of specialists. You don't contract with a plumber to build your whole house, do you? Why should you contract with one proprietary medicine to cure all your troubles?

Oftentimes you run across a building contractor who has a separate plumbing department, his own plastering department, and so on, all of which dovetail together and build the house. This is just what the United Drug Company is doing for you in the medicine line. They have cut down profits; they manufacture Rexall Remedies for over 2,000 retail druggists. These druggists are the only intermediate profit that stand between The United Drug Company and the patient.

Could the United Drug Company, of which we are a member, afford to make one poor medicine in this line? Does not common sense tell you that one poor medicine would ruin the sale of the other 199 preparations? If you bought a Rexall preparation and it didn't do for you what we claim it will, would you buy another one of our articles? We believe not. Therefore each preparation must be good—it is good. We who are in the drug business know the formulas of these Rexall preparations. We believe in them so implicitly that we stand back of them, with our guarantee to refund you your money if they do not benefit you.

For Nervousness—

For Constipation—

For Coughs—

PURITY OF PROMISE

"Make Good" and you'll Be Prosperous

ADVERTISING is a PROMISE. It is also a CONTRACT. When we agree to do certain things, we have to "make good." Otherwise we lose the confidence and faith of our patrons.

The principle we adopted in 1896, when CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC were put on the market, was to make no PROMISE in our salesmanship, that was not characterized by PURITY and TRUTH and HONESTY, so that we could always DELIVER what we AGREED.

It was our own PURE DRUG law and our PROMISE has always been FULFILLED.

The best inducement we can offer our friends in our advertising, past and present, is to TRY CASCARETS only ONCE! We promised and promise now, that these dainty, little candy tablets, if faithfully tried, would prove to be the most perfect Bowel Medicine ever placed before the American family,—as dependable for their effects as nature herself.

In our eleven years of PROMISE, we have never failed to fulfill, and that's why we have gained the friendship of millions of the American people, who have experienced the reliable quality of our product.

If the ONE TIME that we can induce the reader to try Cascarets proves to be a failure and disappointment, it means a BROKEN PROMISE and NEVER a repetition of his patronage. The fact that at the present time over ONE MILLION of boxes of Cascarets are sold every month PROVES that we believe in "Purity of Promise" and have delivered the goods.

So we ask you with the endorsement of the American people behind our statements, to accept our promises and try Cascarets as the best all-around personal and family medicine for all STOMACH and BOWEL troubles, especially CONSTIPATION and all its complications. Nearly every serious illness is caused by a derangement of the Stomach and Bowels. Cascarets will strengthen the walls of the weakened intestines and make them act exactly as nature intended them to do—NO VIOLENCE, but plain, soothing action.

Another PROMISE we are willing to make is that Cascarets will prove to be a great PREVENTIVE of DISEASE. They are anti-septic, destroy disease germs all through the FOOD-CHANNELS, and are what soap is for the outer body—a perfect cleansing means for the inside body.

One of our mottos has been: "Keep clean inside!" and Cascarets will help you to do it and avoid disease resulting from internal neglect.

If you have never tried Cascarets before, go to your druggist TO-DAY and buy a little 10c box. It will convince you. BE SURE TO GET WHAT YOU ASK—THE GENUINE!

JURY FREEDOM OF ANCIENTS NOW IN DANGER

Bill Before Judiciary Committee To-day Proposes Big Changes in Laws Affecting Jurors.

LOBSTER DAY ON THE HILL

The withdrawal of a privilege always heretofore enjoyed by members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, that of not being called upon to serve on juries, is being made the most important, though it is the most sensational feature of a bill taken up at the State House to-day by the House Judiciary Committee.

Persons under 25 years of age, in the opinion of the framer of this bill, Representative William Tuttle of Pittsfield, are not capable of acting as jurors. On the other hand, a man of 66, 67, 68 or 69 is not too old. Heretofore, a man old enough to vote was quite old enough to serve on a jury, and 65 was the age limit. Mr. Tuttle makes it 25 to 70.

Further on, the bill writes an entire new section into the Massachusetts law relative to jurors and jury service, providing that, "neither the Board of Registrars of Voters of any city nor the Board of Election Commissioners of the City of Boston shall place the name of any person on the list until after such board shall have fairly and fully investigated his reputation, character and fitness for such service, and such board may call for and have the services of a reasonable number of the police of its city, for such time as such board deems best; not exceeding ninety days in each year, to aid in making investigations."

Comes also to-day before the John Judiciary Committee Representative John J. Conway, champion of no-elevated-street-wire-in-Forest-Hills-square, to ask favor his report on a brief bill providing that "all jurors in the courts of the Commonwealth shall be thoroughly instructed by the presiding justice in regard to their duties and responsibilities at the beginning of their service and before they have begun to try any cases."

Representative William M. Brigham of Marlboro tells the committee that there ought to be a provision in the law that "when a verdict is set aside for no other reason than that the damages awarded are excessive or inadequate, the justice shall so state in writing, and the verdict shall be set aside only so far as it relates to damages, and a new trial ordered upon the question of damages only."

Wants Lodgers Reported.

Senator Prouty, holding that the keepers of lodging houses should keep a record of their lodgers, manager of Valley Falls, defended her title last night to the possession of "the finest figure in New York."

This, at least, in the way Miss Jeanette Horton, the victim, tells the story. Other members of "The Belle of Mayfair" company corroborate her account. Miss Surratt has as yet made no reply to her rival's story.

Miss Surratt poses as a "Gibson Girl" in a living picture group near the end of the piece. Miss Horton, with seven other show girls, fill in the background.

Miss Surratt wears a black velvet princess gown, literally molded to her exquisite figure. To insure its effect, she stipulates that there shall be no other gown like it on the stage. She accused Miss Horton of breaking this rule. Miss Horton denies it. True, her gown has a train, but it is of yellow and quite different in ornamentation from Miss Surratt's.

The latter hardly waited for the end of the picture to punish the offender. She and Miss Horton were still in sight of part of the audience when she ordered show girl by the throat, half choked her and then beat her down to ribbons. Those in the audience who could see nearly went with excitement and interest.

THIRTEEN HURT IN COLLISION AT SOMERVILLE

White the South Acton accommodation train was standing on the track about fifty yards west of the Union Square station in Somerville last night, awaiting the signal to go ahead, the Troy express crashed into it, and as a result of the collision one man lost a leg and may die and a dozen others were injured.

There were about thirty passengers in the telescoped car, and those, having seen the headlight of the approaching locomotive, threw the forward part of the car and escaped injury. Wilbur C. White of Somerville, a B. & M. conductor, who was on his way home, attempted to leave by the rear door, and was caught just as the express struck the car. He left leg was cut off at the knee. His condition is critical.

The car caught fire from the gas lights, but the Somerville firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

Among those slightly injured were Colonel C. F. Spalding, R. L. Ripley, George Kerns, H. Burnham and Miss Marion Rice, all of Waltham. Others were Stephen W. Carlin, James E. Roberts of North Cambridge and Andrew Mahoney of No. 3 Vine street, Somerville. Their injuries consisted of cuts and bruises.

Thaw Case Shows Need of Watchful Care in the Home

By Beatrice Fairfax

IT is earnestly to be hoped that all parents and brothers will take to heart the great lesson taught by the Thaw trial and all its attendant horrors.

It is a lesson that shows how absolutely important it is that the young girl of the family should be guarded and guided past the pitfalls that stand ever ready for her ignorant and innocent little feet to stumble in.

She has no experience of the world and its wickedness; she is no judge of men; all she wants is a good time, and she grasps it eagerly, with no thought of the consequences.

Poor baby! She pays bitterly sometimes for her love of fun and pretty things, and no one thinks to blame any one but herself. No one thinks to ask, "What were her parents and brothers doing to allow her to become friends with such a man?"

It is the parents' solemn duty to know who their daughter's friends are and all about them.

The mother should know who her girl friends are, and whether they are the right kind of girls for her to know.

Guard Your Sister

THE father and brother should know all about the men whose acquaintanceship she forms, and they should be very careful to let those men understand that they can take no liberties without coming up against the strong right arm of her natural guardians.

A brother can tell immediately if his sister's girl friends are the right kind of girls for her to associate with.

Sisters are not always ready to take the advice of their brothers, but the brother can tell his mother, and she can, with patience and tact, guide her little daughter see things in their proper light.

Of course there are some wilful girls who will take the advice of no one. And they, poor children, must learn from the hardest teacher of all—experience.

The moment a girl begins to go out by herself in the evenings and refuses to tell where she goes or with whom, it is time for the home guard to be on the watch.

Girls Thoughtless

THE man whose intentions are honorable will come to the house openly and be only too glad to meet the entire family and make a good impression.

But the girl of sixteen does not stop to think of that. She thinks that to be clandestine is romantic, and a handsome face and smooth manner appeal far more to her than straightforward manliness.

Remember this, parents and brothers, and don't relax your watchfulness for an instant. The horrors of the Thaw trial have shown that ravening wolves in the shape of so-called men are ever on the watch for ignorant little lambs.

It has thrown a hideous light on the vice of white slavery. The more hopelited to stamp it out are the natural guardians of our young girls.

The fathers and brothers must stand shoulder to shoulder and guard their young daughters and sisters.

HOW AN EXTRAVAGANT WOMAN THROWS MONEY TO THE WINDS

Girls Should Learn the Secret of Buying

"GIRLS are so extravagant nowadays that it makes a fellow think twice before he ventures on matrimony," said a young man the other day.

He was an earnest, industrious young man, with a successful future before him. He was so sure that he was anxious to marry, but felt that girls expected so much luxury that it seriously handicapped the man who was trying to get on in the world.

"There is no sense in marrying," he said, "if you are going to incur a load of debts or break down under the strain of living beyond your income."

That sounds a rather serious accusation, girls, and, though it may be slightly exaggerated, there certainly is some truth in it.

You know there are other forms of extravagance than that of dress or of spending money too freely. There is the extravagance of waste, which usually comes through ignorance.

Many a young wife seizes upon her duties with the firm intention of keeping house as economically as possible, she means well, but rarely does she has never been taught how to manage.

Buys Things Blindly

When she goes to market she buys blindly, without an idea of quantity, cut or quality. She throws away much that might be utilized because she does not know the importance of saving odds and ends.

The husband works hard and wonders where in the world the money goes, when apparently there is little show for it.

You can't learn all these things in a minute, girls. You must learn them gradually. Most of you will marry, so why not begin now and learn something about the practical side of life.

Learn to cook and to sew and to take care of a house. Never mind the fancy styles of cooking. Fudge and caramel cake won't prove a very substantial diet for your hard working husbands. Remember that your mothers started housekeeping in the plainest manner, and if they are the mistresses of comfortable homes now they have done their share by economy and wise management.

Begin in Small Way

The wife can help make a comfortable, luxurious home just as well as the husband. But she must be satisfied to begin in a small way.

There is nothing so discouraging to a hard-working man as an extravagant, wasteful wife. Many happy homes have come to grief through woman's foolish extravagance.

The more fact that her neighbor has bought a new dress or a piano is enough to upset the extravagant woman. She nags at her husband until, for peace's sake, he lets her buy something that he can ill afford.

When a young man sees his married friend struggling along under a load of debt and looking careworn and ten years older than his age he becomes a bachelor naturally concludes that matrimony has its drawbacks.

Men Get Scared

Another deterrent to matrimony is that girls talk foolishly about what they expect when they are married. They do not half mean what they say, but the young men don't know this, and it frightens them.

"Indeed, I won't marry unless I can have a maid to do the work," a girl will declare.

Now it does not hurt a girl one particle to do her own housework when she marries; in fact, it is good for her. An experience of this kind will have nothing on earth with which to occupy herself.

Later, if she can afford a servant, it will be very nice, especially if she has a young family to look after. But her mother probably raised a large family and did the housework as well, and it is no hardship for her to do the same thing.

A great many young men can afford to marry if they can find economical wives, but many of them cannot afford the extra expense of a servant.

So brace up, girls; don't expect too much and don't talk too freely, or you will find yourselves left out in the matrimonial game.

What Is the True Sphere of the Ideal American Woman?

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

NOT long ago a Union Theological Seminary professor made a most strange talk before a New York woman's club.

The speaker's name, I believe, was Fagnani, a name that sounds but little like America, and certainly, if he was correctly reported, the professor's sentiments are diametrically opposed to everything that Americans is supposed to stand for.

The gentleman from Union Theological Seminary is reported as having addressed himself to the club as follows: "I know that you are all devoted to your washtubs and your children, but the question is whether these should be allowed to absorb your vitality."

Certainly not! No woman should devote her entire life to the bearing of children and the washing of clothes.

Woman is, by the eternal laws of Nature, a child-bearer, but she is more than that.

She is a moral, intellectual, spiritual being, with capacities for thought, high ethical endeavor and fine spiritual vision, and her nature is not fully rounded out unless these latter things are realized in her life.

Woman a Mother

BUT still, the fact remains that primarily and fundamentally woman is a mother.

She should be a thinker and a moralist and a seer, a dreamer of glorious dreams and a participant in all the great, thrilling game of life; but all that she is or does should be subordinate to her womanhood—to her motherhood.

Evidently Professor Fagnani does not believe this, hence his amazing bit of Advice to the women of America, which, it is devoutly hoped, the women of America will treat with all becoming scorn.

Says the professor: "Surely no woman should be satisfied to be merely the mother of a family."

But does not the gentleman with the un-American name know that to be the mother of a family, in the full, true sense of that word, is to be the noblest thing that any woman can possibly be in this world?

To be the mother of a family—to bear children, to love and educate those children, to bring them up in the way of the domestic pieties and the civic virtues, so that they shall become an honor to their city, State and nation, forces for good, soldiers in the cause of human progress, great beacon lights upon the hills of life up to which others shall look and be cheered and encouraged in the battle against injustice and wrong —to be such a mother is to be something that not even a Union Theological Seminary professor can with impunity scoff at and ridicule.

"Mad World"

THAT Professor calls the old-fashioned home woman a "parasite," and declares himself in favor of the woman who, despising "parasitism," learns a "trade" and goes out into the big, busy, "real" world.

And, I may add, to carry about with him the idea upon which she shall lavish her affection in lieu of bestowing that affection upon her child!

Poor Ophelia! as she great Shakespeare would say.

But there is consolation in the thought that the overwhelming majority of women the world over are true to their womanhood, and have sworn Hauntbal's oath against the crazy isms which would unsex and uncrown them.

The Leg o' Mutton Sleeve to Return?

ADVANCE Spring and Summer styles indicate a revival of the "leg o' mutton" sleeve. Designers are working, and got at all slowly, swaying in that direction, and many of the sleeves of the-day-after-to-morrow if not of to-morrow itself, will be fashioned on these lines.

One quaint costume, in which these particular sleeves play a leading role, is made of lace ruffles, with bias bands of dull green velvet on skirt and bodice; the shoulder-line is perfectly flat and sloping, and the sleeve, which reaches below the elbow, are of the true "leg o' mutton" shape.

The entire effect is unbelievably dainty, fine muslin and recall—in every detail—the old-fashioned sleeves worn by our great grandmothers.

We are threatened with a revival of the crinoline. With this will probably come the picturesque fashion in which the skirts may hang softly and "dance" in the desired manner, and this again means the revival of the round skirt, which clears the ground without being at all stiff, and the skillfully pleated petticoats which hold the skirt in the correct position and which give an eminently fascinating impression of fluffy laces and masses of fragile muslins with each movement of the wearer.

It is impossible to picture a more satisfactory and becoming style of afternoon frocking, dancing, spring and Summer wear, than this.

One Paris model shows a skirt round and very full at the hem, but over the hips and thighs the material in Indian muslin in a delicate shade of coral pink and a series of graduated tucks reaching from the hem to about twelve inches below the knee.

A number of beautifully made petticoats fashioned in the style of those worn by "skirt dancers"—hold the skirt in correct position, and the cross-cut bodice displays a dainty little chemisette of lace in front.

There is a shaped waistband, composed of coral pink and very pale blue satin ribbon, the long ends falling loose at the left side, and altogether the whole dress is charming and attractive.

Should this style—correctly, the style of afternoon frock women will find themselves among this coming Summer. One of the leading points of the 1882 dress will be the fashionable points of the petticoat, which will be trimmed bounced petticoats and the round skirt, which suggests in a subtle way, the presence of a small crinoline!

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

FOR the benefit of its women readers the BOSTON AMERICAN, from day to day, will call attention to good shopping opportunities in the Boston stores.

An effort will be made to note only genuine money-saving bargains well worth the attention of women shoppers in search of good goods at reduced prices.

These bargains are specially selected for the readers of the Woman's Page and will not appear in any of the regular advertisements of the big stores.

Among the offerings Saturday, for instance, are the following:

SOMMER COMPANY will sell one-third floor black taffeta silk petticoats with deep pin-tucked flounce, also with shirred and scalloped pleated flounce, regular $5.98 value, for $3.98.

GILCHRIST COMPANY are showing children's dresses, plain colors, in serges and American cashmere, made in sailor, Russian and yoke styles, very daintily trimmed, values up to $7.50, as a special for Saturday only, at $3.75. Also children's dresses in bearskin and heavy astrachan, silk lining and ties, worth up to $2.50, for 89 cents.

R. H. WHITE, in the men's furnishing department, will offer men's negligee shirts of madras and percale, in stripes and fancies, for 39 cents, which they have been selling for 75 cents. Also men's cotton hose with merino split sole for 12½ cents a pair; these they have been selling for 25 cents.

JORDAN MARSH CO. will place on sale men's Winter weight under shirts (drummers' samples), 75-cent to $1.25 qualities, for 50 cents. Also ladies' black fleeced hose, 25-cent hose, which they will close out at 12½ cents. A small lot of slightly soiled silk and wool ladies' vests and tights, selling at one-third of original price, will be found on the third floor.

DODGE-SPEAR CO. will make little girls glad by giving for only 39 cents apiece 45 dresses in fancy striped flannel, trimmed with braid. These are for girls from 4 to twelve years of age and are $1 values.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON will offer what ought to be a lure for bargain-lovers: it will be a few pair to odd sizes of the regular $4 Bon Ton corset in p-to-date models, for $1.67 per pair. They will also sell $4.50 tourist coats, made of herringbone cloth and with fancy collar, for $2.75. They will also give you a chance to get a $4 three-piece bedroom set for $2.89. These three are lace and ribbon trimmed and put up in boxes.

WOLF'S, in order not to carry over their stock, will sell at a loss a handsome $7 pillow-shaped fox muff for $3.98. If it's a big, soft, fluffy muff, it's a beauty muff, and a bargain not to be overlooked.

A. SHUMAN & CO. will offer a rare bargain in men's and youths' blue shirt waists, for wear their regular $1.50 waist for 89 cents to-morrow. These distinctly pretty waists have ¾-length sleeves; insertions of embroidery and val. lace. They were ordered last Fall, anticipating a rise in cotton goods, but exceptional weather conditions

HENRY SIEGEL CO. will have a final clearance in boys' long overcoats in fancy and plain colors, offering $3 and $4 values for $2.50; these are in broken sizes. They will also have $7.50 and $9.75 coats for $5.00. This is a clear loss to Filene. They are clearing these out considerably below cost.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

MATTER OF DISAPPROVAL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man nineteen years old and have been acquainted with a young lady for some months, and I am sure I am very much in love with her. We met at a pleasure resort in company with a girl friend and a young gentleman friend. She has concluded because we had some time to ourselves that I was not sincere in my attention to her. The matter is settled deeply, as she will not listen to any explanation.

CONSTANT READER.

SHE probably disapproves of drinking of any kind and feels that you would not be seriously injured thereby and so enjoy seeing you sipping with other people. If you are steady and sincere in your affection, go to her and tell her so, and do not drink and that you do care for her. Doubtless she will be only too glad to believe you.

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years of age and am deeply in love with a young lady of the same age who is employed in the same concern as myself. Now, my troubles are the following: Within the past few weeks I have raised a mustache of which I am proud, and to which the young lady seriously objects and has on this account been treating me in a cooly of late. The last time since then shown marked attention to another young man employed in the same office. As I am very much in love with this young lady and would like to be without her, I beg of you to advise me as to whether I should have my mustache taken off to please her, or whether she is asking too much of me.

J. W.

IT is simply a question as to which you think more of—your personal vanity or the girl. I think she cannot care very deeply for you or she would not object so strongly. If you like the girl best, have your mustache shaved off. If you like the mustache best, let the girl go.

DOES HE LOVE HER?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a young man who has been calling on me for the last year or more, but for the last three months he would only come once a week, and has taken me to several places of amusement. I have a friend who comes to see me whenever she thinks this young man is at the house and she asks him to see her home or waits until he goes and then goes with him. Now, Miss Fairfax, at times he seems her home and sometimes he will not go unless I go too. Do you think my friend does right in asking him to take her home, and does he do right by doing so?

I dearly love this young man. How can I find out if he loves me? I think he does, because he calls me "Dear" and such pet names.

C. L.

I THINK your girl friend shows very little tact in always thrusting herself forward so much. He cannot refuse to see her home when she asks him to, but you have to let time show whether or not he loves you. Calling you pet names is not an infallible sign. However, as he calls and seems to see you so often I think he must be fond of you.

DON'TS FOR GUESTS

DON'T, if your hostess is a busy housekeeper, fail to ask her the morning after your arrival if there is any little household duty in which you can assist her during the time of your stay.

DON'T, if your hosts are early people, emphasize the fact that you "never go to bed before half-past 11.

DON'T leave your hostess in any doubt as to the time of your departure on the day your visit ends. In most houses the morning is the most convenient time for a guest to leave.

DON'T try over and "murder" your hostess's music.

DON'T in the early morning monopolize the only bathroom in the house without first having asked if it is wanted at any time.

DON'T appropriate your hostess's writing table every time you happen to have letters to answer if there is a table in your bedroom that you can use for the purpose.

DON'T indulge in "fits of the blues." The miserable, depressed guest is nothing less than a trial to the unhappy people who have to listen to her dismal outpourings.

DON'T burn gas or electric light in your bedroom all night if you are staying in a house where there is only a very limited income.

DON'T neglect to be observant of any little hitch that may occur in the domestic machinery.

DON'T come down in the morning before the breakfast bell rings.

DON'T absent yourself from the family circle for a long time without explanation. If you intend to write letters, have a nap, or go for a walk, say so.

DON'T appear bored. However dull you may be feeling. Your hostess is, in all probability, doing her best to give you a good time, and the least you can do is to seem to appreciate her efforts.

DON'T, even if you think so, make it evident that you consider the children badly brought up and a thresome and the master of the house a bore.

DON'T arrive with only three-quarters of your belongings and have to borrow necessary articles until they can be posted from home.

DON'T think it necessary to try to keep up a continual flow of small talk. The talker who "goes on forever" is apt to become a bore.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Shattered Dreams

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.

BASIL THURSTON never relaxed his agitated pace until he had arrived at the avenue gates of Redbrow as his lonely lakeside home was called. Redbrow is approached by a long winding avenue between ragged oaks, with here and there a storm-rent pine standing like a sentinel to guard the wild approach to the sequestered spot.

As Basil entered the avenue he paused abruptly, and resting against one of the rough-cut pillars of the gate, directed almost a despairing glance over the long swelling meadows vaguely visible now in the gathering twilight, and the purple belt of trees which formed a distant ridge and indicated the immediate precincts of Moorcombe.

Was there ever a time, he asked himself bitterly, when he had not loved Sylvia Thurston with the one love of his life?

And he could remember no such time, as he looked back, back, over the bygone years, carrying incident after incident which seemed to lead him into the dim mists of his infancy.

And to think now that, after all those years of loving companionship and perfect mutual trust, Sylvia was to be no more to him than the acquaintance of yesterday! His refused rose to entertain so hateful—so impossible a thought.

His love for Sylvia—his unceasing dream of securing her for his wife one day—had furnished his otherwise lonely and uneventful life with color, interest, and unflagging nerve and energy.

Girl in the Case

"How can you possibly live such a life, Basil?" his friend, Will Dacre, again and again wrote him. "Do make up your mind, old man, to fall in with my proposition. You will not regret the step, I assure you. Just give it a trial."

Thus Will Dacre had been Basil's particular chum at Harvard, and although they had met but once since their school days had ended, the warm friendship had never relaxed between them.

Will Dacre was the son of a clergyman in a remote New Hampshire village, and as Will had been unsuccessful in one or two professions which he had taken up, he found life at home singularly irksome to him, and his oft-repeated proposal to Basil was that they should go out to Colorado together (some cousins of Dacre's were already there) and try their luck at the gold fields.

But although Basil Thurston's prospects at Redbrow were not a whit more encouraging than his friend's, he could not bring himself, up to this, to fall in with Will Dacre's proposal. The image of Sylvia—his wild dream of winning the girl sooner or later for his wife—always rose between him and the project which Dacre so enthusiastically urged. Will had hinted at the true solution of Basil's repeated refusals.

"There must be a girl in the case, Basil. Well, if she is rich and if she will marry you, I'm sure I wish you every good luck. But if not, don't be wasting the best years of your life in pursuing a shadow."

Dacre knew of Basil's worldly circumstances, and on this account felt privileged to go straight to the point when writing to his friend.

He knew that Basil's father, after the prevailing fashion of the Thurstons, had died heavily in debt, and that the mortgages on Redbrow had been paid off by Basil's grandaunt, a certain Miss Letitia Thurston, who had then made her home at Redbrow, having practically purchased the place. Basil's position, therefore, in the home of his fathers could not be considered, to say the least of it, a prosperous or hopeful position.

Ominous Silence

Yet, of course, if he had hopes of securing a wealthy bride, that altered everything. Will Dacre thought. But Basil's silence on the matter was ominous.

"No, no; it is too late now. Let Ray mond look to it." The sooner he and I have an explanation on the matter the better."

With some such thought as this Basil's bitter reverie came to an end for the time being, as he turned away from the moss-grown pillar and toiled along the overgrown avenue amid the oaks. The shadows of the twilight had drawn their dusky veil over the meadows by the time Basil reached his home, a solitary house, partly weather-stained, partly ivy-covered, perched on the brow of a ridge in the heart of a wild waste.

It was perhaps somewhat odd that in Basil's troubled meditation no disquieting thoughts as to Dr. Mueller had obtruded themselves. Perhaps the reason was that Basil, as he had told Sylvia so plainly, felt satisfied on the score of his cousin's love for himself, and knowing that she was no fickle kind of girl to marry a man without loving him, he therefore felt at ease so far on this special matter.

He felt that Raymond Thurston, and not Carl Mueller, was the obstacle in the way, and he swore to remove that obstacle, human agency could accomplish the task.

If only I had the chance of talking to him this very night," Basil said to himself as he entered the house, and ten minutes later he presented himself in the drawing room, where his grandaunt and his sister Rose awaited him.

Aunt Letitia

Miss Letitia Thurston was a tall, grand looking old lady, with a somewhat stern, strongly marked face, fine, clear, dark eyes and a firm mouth and chin.

Her hair was silver-white and she still wore it in the bygone fashion of corkscrew curls supported by tortoise shell combs at each side of her dome-like forehead. She was now eighty-five, and was as surprisingly alert and active, both in mind and body.

She had been born a Bracebridge, the marriage of Basil's father having been one to live with a married sister, and some years later Miss Letitia had left a handsome legacy to Basil's mother who had always lived with her unmarried sister.

A large part of this legacy was subsequently invested in Redbrow, the result that Miss Letitia was now a wealthy old lady, and it had been a matter of no inconvenience whatever to her to pay off the mortgages on Redbrow some years before, when she had decided to return to her old home to spend the remainder of her life there.

She was at this moment seated, erect and dignified, in a tall straight-backed oak chair, busily engaged at her interminable knitting, her gold-rimmed spectacles resting on her handsome, thin high-bridged nose, a richly trimmed white lace cap adorning her silver hair.

B. F. KEITH GETS CONTROL OF ORPHEUM

B. F. Keith is to have two theatres in Boston as a result of the merging of the Percy Williams-Hammerstein interests with the Keith-Proctor booking offices.

The Orpheum Theatre here, which has been managed by Percy G. Williams, is to be transferred to the Keith manage ment at once, and Mr. Keith will run both houses, continuing the Orpheum as a vaudeville theatre.

How long this plan will remain in force depends upon the amount of business done.

Edward L. Robinson, at present resident manager of the Orpheum, is to be transferred to Mr. Williamson's Colonial Theatre in New York, in a similar capacity. Mr. Keith has not as yet announced the name of the manager he will put over the Orpheum, but it will probably be a local man.

GET TRACE OF MISSING BANK OFFICIAL IN N. Y.

NEW BRITAIN, Ct., Feb. 15.—The directors of the Savings Bank of New Britain, it is understood, have a clue to the whereabouts in New York of William F. Walker, the missing treasurer of the bank, but no trace of the securities which Walker took from the bank has been found.

The bank situation evidently rests on the apprehension of Walker, for the run of depositors has ended, and the institution could resume business without delay.

The developments of yesterday were that C. H. Mitchell, prosecuting attorney, on his own initiative has drawn up a warrant for the arrest of Walker on the charge of appropriating to his own use two bonds of $1,000 each belonging to the bank, and has sent Chief of Police W. J. Rawlings to New York to inform the latter of the fact that the missing treasurer is wanted on a criminal charge.

MAINE SOLONS KILL PROBE OF STATE AFFAIRS

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 15.—The Republicans in the House again demonstrated yesterday their intention to smother any legislation which looks to the taking of papers of corporations or the investigation of State departments.

The Democrats endeavored to get passed an order calling for the investigation of any of the State departments, but they were defeated by the Republicans, representative Johnson of Waterville, the Democratic leader, spoke in opposition to the Senate amendment, which had been tacked on to the Milliken investigation order, which provides for the investigation of any of the departments of the State by the Committee on Salaries and Fees.

The yeas and nays were demanded on the Democratic motion and the result was almost a strict party vote. Representative Gleason of Bangor being the only Republican to vote with the Democrats. The result was 80 yeas to 56 nays.

LITTLE BABY CURED OF ECZEMA

Parents Applied to Hospitals and Doctors but Could Get No Relief—Grew Worse Under Doctor's Prescription—Friends Recommended Cuticura—Result

A SPEEDY AND PERMANENT CURE

"We express to you herewith our best thanks for the cure of our baby from eczema. The eczema appeared when the child was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different every time, but nothing brought relief. A physician recommended a salve which we think was the fire after two days' use as the eczema became worse so that the baby scratched his face. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. Even the poorest man can pay that instead of throwing it into the doctor's lap. I myself only make two dollars a week as a teamster, but I recommend the Cuticura Remedies strongly to all mothers whose children suffer from such diseases. They are cheap, harmless and good. C. F. Kars and Wife, 343 East 59th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

FOR SORE HANDS

Soak the hands on retiring, in a hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

MELLODY WILL TAKE 'EM ALL ON

Who will be Honey Mellody's next opponent? The local fans are very much interested in the champion welterweight's career, and as he has offered to take them all on in his class and clean up all ambitious claimants for his title, he will be kept busy.

The defeat that wrankles in Honey's mind is that which he sustained at the hands of Joe Thomas, and he would like to wipe it out, but it is not up to him to go after Thomas now that he is champion.

Manager Mooney, who is not going to let any quibbles dictate to his champion, takes only a natural position. He says:

"Mellody will fight Thomas, but he will have to come to our terms and fight on the same scale as the last time he met Honey. The fought for 75 per cent. to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser, and those terms still have to prevail if Thomas wants a match.

"And he will have to make the weight. Mellody is always ready to defend the title at 142 pounds, and will let Thomas come in at 145 pounds if he can't do better.

"Personally I can't see how Thomas can do as low as 145 pounds, as he has been getting heavier, and was willing to meet Hugo Kelly at the middleweight limit, 154 pounds.

"If Thomas accepts our terms Mellody will fight him before any club which makes a satisfactory offer."

GRACIE BARON WINS HEAT FOR 'ETERNITY CUP'

By far the greatest surprise of the season was furnished when "Bob" Thompson headed the summary of the "eternity" challenge cup at Charles River Speedway with his trotting mare Gracie Baron, and it was, too, the most closely contested of the seven races for the valuable trophy to date, the winner being in doubt till the very final strides.

It was an initial start of Gracie Baron for the cup and in the general opinion it was asking a whole lot of the little mare to go against such speedy horses as Alice Carr, Tom Pfaff and Nancy Nelson.

Thomas G. Plant captured the opening heat by a neck over Nancy Nelson, but as she had thrown a shoe there was quite a delay before the next trip, in this she again threw a shoe, and was early out of the contest. As Tom Pfaff was short of work through the recent illness of Isaac Sexton it was considered the better part of judgment to withdraw him for the last heat.

Through the absence of George Johnson, a new starting judge was found in Al Purbush, the excellent style in which he got the field away gained him a lot of praise. If the sleighing holds there will be another race for the cup Saturday. As it stands now, six different horses have victories to their honor. The summary:

"ETERNITY CHALLENGE CUP"—Pacing purse. Trotters to high, owners to drive, quarter-mile tracks.

Alice Carr, blk. m. (Thomas G. Plant)	1	2	2

PARENT WON'T SIGN FOR LESS THAN 3 YEARS

One more hitch in the contract department of the Boston National League. It's Fred Parent, the diminutive shortstop, who declines to sign the contract which Treasurer Wrigley put up to him at his home in Watford, Mich., yesterday. Parent gave as his reason for declining to affix his John Hancock to the document that he wanted a three-year contract instead of the paper which called for one year's service. McBreen took Parent's statement that he had no authority to make a three years' contract, inasmuch as the one year contract was the document President Taylor had authorized him to bring to Stanford. The conversation between the two on the matter of contract lasted only about five minutes. Parent insisting that he wanted the longer lease and McBreen changing the subject when he saw that Parent was determined not to sign.

BEST SKATERS IN HANDICAP

Tonight at the Cave Square Rink there will be a professional handicap race. Many of the best skaters in New England will compete in this race and it will be a most exciting affair, owing to the handicap given. There is keen rivalry among the skaters who will enter this race they have not had a fair show to know which are the fastest. Among them Hamilton, Williams, Barrett, MacDougall, Merrill, Ed. Carroll, Jack Carroll, Cook and several others will compete.

A race is being arranged between three of the best lady skaters in the country and will be run on one of the nights next week. Cora B. Harvey, who is considered one of the best lady skaters in the country, will be seen in this race and is a guarantee that the race will be a speed contest from start to finish.

HORSEMEN OF LYNN DINE WELL

There was a warm old time at the Oxford Club in Lynn at the fourth annual banquet of the wide-awake driving club of that city. From the manner in which the officials of the organization handled out the good things it was evident that older driving clubs in the State have plenty to do in the future to even hold their end up as friendly rivals in the entertaining art.

A big delegation went from the Dorchester Driving Club and arrived early to participate in the reception held previous to the spread. It was during this hour the feeling of fraternity between the two clubs was, if possible, still more firmly cemented.

The after-dinner speaking was particularly brilliant, and the sallies of wit, jokes and personal "digs" kept all in a high state of hilarity.

President Walter E. Newbert of the Dorchesters brought out the fact of an interesting meeting between the clubs at Combination Park on June 17, and thought it might be a good plan to arrange for some of the other local driving clubs to take part with them in a grand interstate meeting later in the season.

Ex-President William La Croix of the Lynns mentioned that the Rockdale track was to be denied them hereafter, as it is to be cut into house lots. This leaves them without a place to speed their horses, unless the Lynn Speedway is completed early in the Spring.

Mayor C. N. Harney of Lynn said that he was in hopes the Speedway would be finished this year, but he held out no very strong promises that such would be a fact. Frank Thurdhill and John W. McKenna of the city finance committee talked in about the same vein, but did predict that at no distant date the Lynn horsemen would secure a speedway.

Aldermen Martin L. Call of Lynn brought forth applause when he related how his body was strongly in support of the horsemen and their wishes. Asa D. Newhall, one of the city assessors, said that the driving club had increased the taxes sufficiently in the past few years so that it ought to be able to secure all it demanded.

President Levi Lord of the Hamilton Driving Club gave a history of the building of the speedway in his town entirely by subscription, and the wide interest the residents had in the sport. Other speakers were D. Bodnick, Fred J. Brand, A. S. Gushee, Herbert W. Beatham of Lynn, R. S. Fitch, S. Walter Wales, George H. Greenwood, Solly Wolfson and Sam G. Brown.

President F. L. Babbitt of the Lynns was toastmaster. He did the honors of his position with ease and dignity. At the conclusion three cheers were given the Lynns by the members of the Dorchesters, who were returned by the former with zest.

MARTIN BEAT JOSEPH GRIM

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 15.—Terry Martin handed out a good lacing to Joe Grim in the windup at the Broadway Athletic Club last night. Joe caught a Tartar in Martin, and the latter, by making good use of his left jab, had the Italian guessing in every one of the rounds. Joe, however, was never in any danger of going the voyage. His swings and jabs were mainly wild, and the Irishman had very little trouble in getting away from Joe's wallops.

A stiff left as Joe was coming in was landed by Martin square on the Italian's nose in the second round, and that started the claret going. Martin did most of the forcing, but the bout as a whole was rather tame. Joe Ryan knocked out Harry Jones in a half minute of the first round in the semi-windup. Ryan caught Jones flush on the jaw as he was coming in, and Jones was out for five minutes.

B. & A. SUMMONS THE DISTICH AND OLD PEGASUS TO ITS AID

A DISTICH IS SUITABLE FOR THE VENERABLE B. & A.

FITS ANCIENT ENGINES.

Ancient Form of Poesy Suitable to Road's Archaic Equipment Used to Advertise the Line.

Venerable Child of the Muses Was Grey-Haired When Athenian Poets Sang.

WOW! the laureate's liquid lay!
Poetry for the B. & A.
Classic distich, it you please,
Gets the sauce as Sophocles.
Wonder was it writ by Bronx,
Bronx who came to Huston town?
Here's the limit in linguistics,
These here corporation distichs.
(Railroad Roundelays).

GIDDAP, Pegasus!

The Boston & Albany division of the New York Central, commonly known as the "Boston & Almost," is advertising with distiches.

Distiches isn't a newspaper or a publishing house. A distich is two lines of verse. Here's the B. & A. work, as noted in a Boston morning paper:

Tea Trains A Day
Via the "B. & A."

Thus is an old and honorable institution seized upon to consummate a corporation's end.

The distich is a venerable child of the muses. It is most archaic in appearance of the Boston & Albany equipments. Its history and dereliction take one back of this mundane sphere back to the days of

"The glory that was Greece
And the grandeur that was Rome."

When the Attic poets foregathered by the banks of the limpid Cephissus the distich was an old story. Its verse is one that shows that it is be compounded of the Greek "di" or "dis," meaning two, and "stichos," meaning a row, or a verse in the sense of a line of words. The combination means in brief a league of lines in poetry.

Stiff with Classic Air.

Webster says:

Distich—a couple of verses or poetic lines making a complete sense, an epigram two verses.

Of course, the distich, for excellence, should have a poetical sentiment, preferably a classical one, like the following:

"Hours move other gives that bite 'em.
This gives us, of infinitum."

The distich is stiff with the classic atmosphere, it makes complete sense and is etymologically and entomologically and grammatic.

The distich has ever been quite comme il faut and comme de terre. When the Grecian dandies assembled at the agora they by chances it was considered very chic to lose off a few original distiches now and then.

In later days, notably "in the golden reign of the good Hermon Augustus Hall," the elegant young Arabian man-about town thought nothing of a distich more or less than to show that he was posted in the Shakspere and musical comedy world in particular time. The Eastern fairy teller, who is a great favorite among those who dress his stories with a happy distich or two, just to show his artistic flare.

Merely a Hang-Over.

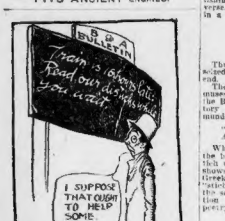
The tellers of fairy stories on behalf of the Boston & Albany, who are much more proficient and facile breed of cats, have devised this distich. Heretofore the old and dust-covered past and yanked the distich up into the limelight to advertise the Boston & Albany. It must seem extraordinary to use a classic form of verse to advertise a modern institution. But this experiment is met by some with the shrewd retort that the Boston & Albany has no modern institution, but merely a hang-over from times that used to be.

It is thought that this opinion influenced the choice of the B. & A. board in hitching the distich as the happy medium of his ideas. He might have used the elegant sonnet, the merry madrigal, the classic limerick, the syncopated syllabication of the ragtime teen room song, or the always up-to-date form of versification.

But no. He harks back, even before the time when the Boston & Albany was a real railroad and frowns up a short and snappy distich, just to show that the Boston & Albany appreciates the poetic side of things.

As a delicate tribute to the natives of Boston, where the Boston & Almost is a real issue, this selection of the distich for exploitation.

The distich betrays the discriminating and the Boston & Albany never sets a poetic pace that makes Pegasus look as though he had the blind staggers.



ONE RAY OF HOPE.

Young Ladies, Do You Want a Career?

What Do You Think of This Kind of a One?

In our modern days, women, young and old, have all sorts of ambitions and all sorts of jobs. They live in a republic, and they can be, or try to be, whatever they like. Nobody has a right to object.

It is a shame that many of them should have to work very hard. It is a triple shame that many should be paid so much less than men for doing work just as well. AND VERY MUCH MORE FAITHFULLY.

It is a disgrace to manhood in this country that millions of women should be working for their daily bread, in a land that could produce enough to keep them all happy at home with pretty children and no worry.

We are writing to-day especially about the women who want A BIG CAREER.

All of these women are interesting. They deserve attention, because they have in them that spirit of restlessness and dissatisfaction WHICH OFTEN PRODUCES SOME OF THE BEST BABIES AND MEN IN HISTORY. Some of these ladies are preaching, some are making speeches, some are trying to be lawyers, some doctors; there are even a few engineers, surveyors and butchers in the ranks of beautiful, restless womanhood.

Because we sympathize with woman's desire for a career we offer to-day to young American women a picture of a career really worth while.

Young, ambitious woman, how would you like to do the biggest thing that any man in the world could possibly do?

You can do it easily enough, if you happen to be the woman worthy of the task. You know THAT THE MAN who does the great thing must be also THE ONE MAN WORTHY OF THE TASK.

You know that there are many men doing their very best that never amount to anything. You know there are others with a better chance working not so well, yet succeeding beyond the dreams of ambition.

Women, it is possible for each one of you, if you happen to be the RIGHT woman, to do a work greater than that of any man.

It was a woman who settled the Civil War and preserved this nation. It was a woman who drove slavery from this continent.

It was a woman whose noble character, firmness, patience stands out to-day, and will always stand out among men.

That woman was happy ninety-eight years ago to-day. HER BABY WAS NESTLED TO HER BREAST. It was a long-legged baby, with hands bigger than usual, which means a little bit bigger than a walnut. This baby had had its hands and face and its whole body washed, and, let us hope, oiled. Its few little foolish hairs had been combed, first on one side and then on the other, to see which would look better.

It had already had many good, square meals and was feeling well. It had yelled and shrieked to open its lungs. It had been admired vastly.

The baby's name was ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

That baby lay on its mother's arm in a very homely bed, in a cabin with a dirt floor, one window and no glass in the window. There was one room to the entire house. That room was the kitchen, dining-room, parlor, bedroom, nursery, AND ALSO THE ROOM IN WHICH THE BABY WAS BORN.

The arm on which the baby's head lay was the arm of the woman that has done the greatest work in this country. It was the arm of Nancy Hanks Lincoln.

The mother did not live to see her baby grow up.

She did not live to hear the cheers that he heard, when victories were won.

She never lived to comfort him and advise him as he struggled against hard conditions and men's ingratitude.

She never lived to see the tears shed by a nation and by the whole world when he died.

But she MADE him and SHE did his work.

That was the woman, young ladies. THAT REALLY HAD A CAREER WORTH TALKING ABOUT.

She never had an automobile, titled friend, silk dress, velvet dress, tight corset, or a hat up on one side and down on the other. She had a plain butternut dress, a sunbonnet tied down with a string. She had a husband who couldn't read or write; he was too busy trying to live from his sixth year. She could barely read or write herself.

BUT SHE HAD A HEART. AND IN IT THE RIGHT FEELING FOR A BABY.

And all the feeling that she had SHE GAVE TO THAT BABY. She didn't give her emotions, her passions, her intensity of thought to any frivolity.

She gave everything that was in her to the child that represented her affection for her husband, her beautiful maternal instinct. SHE GAVE LINCOLN TO THE UNITED STATES. SHE IS AS GREAT AS ANY MAN THAT WAS EVER BORN IN THE WORLD.

Young ladies, we sympathize with all your lofty ambitions. We know just how you feel when you wish that you could balance yourself on one toe like Taglioni.

We know that you wish you could be Adrienne Lecouvreur, have your box filled with all the great men, be applauded behind and in front of the footlights, have Voltaire admire you, and have Rohan, who caned Voltaire, admire you and fight for you.

We know how you feel when you wish that you could not only RECITE the Declaration of Independence on Fourth of July, but write a better one.

But believe this, young women:

If you succeeded in all your dreams; if you could sing like Calve, talk like Roosevelt, fight like Jeffries, vote forty times at every election, run for all the offices and never be beaten, YOU WOULDN'T HAVE AS MUCH OF A CAREER AS THAT PLAIN-FACED WOMAN IN HER ONE-ROOMED HUT, BRINGING INTO THE WORLD THE CHILD THAT WAS DESTINED TO DO SO MUCH FOR IT. HERS WAS THE REAL CREATIVE WORK, and that is the great work in this universe, whether it be the creation of a milky way, of a single planet or of a brain like Lincoln's.

Small Talk of Straphangers

Overheard by Wex Jones

"IT looks pretty favorable for the prisoner now. I don't believe——"

"Well, I do. By the law of evidence——"

"What is this law of evidence they're all talking about, anyway?"

"Well, it's the law—the law, you know, that evidence must be—well, it must be evidence."

"Oh, that's it? I never could understand it before."

"I studied law once. It was when the landlord told me he wanted the flat for some one else. I found he couldn't put me out, according to law, but he evaded it somehow. It cost me $25 to learn that he couldn't do what he did do."

"That's the way with it. A boy broke my glasses with a snowball last Winter, and a lawyer told me I could sue the city for the price, as the city was responsible for leaving the snow there. The new glasses only cost me $15, and I had to give $20 for the advice."

"And did you sue?"

"Nope. Another man told me the first was a chump, and that under the old common law the snow being in the street was an act of Providence. He took $25, although you'd think the common law would be cheaper."

* * *

"Ain't the snow awful, though? And the way they pile it up in hills at the crossings! Our neighbors lost their little boy four days ago, and the police all over the city were on the lookout. One of the detectives said he had a clue that it was the work of the Black Hand, and the family was near crazy with fright.

"And what do you think? Sunday, when it thawed a little, the boy was able to crawl out of the snowpile a street cleaner had happened to dump on him in front of the boy's own home!"

* * *

"It's fierce, I tell you, this city. I see in the papers the Japs want to fight us."

"Pooh, they can't fight us. A man that eats a handful of rice for a meal can't compete with a man that has three good square feeds of steak a day."

"That's right, too. Just what I said to a fellow in the quick-lunch this noon when I was having my piece of lemon pie."

"Mark my words, this Jap affair won't amount to anything. I know the administration's views—I heard Roosevelt make a speech once when he was Governor."

"That so? What sort of a man does he look to be, anyway?"

"Oh—er—just a man, you know. I didn't get a very close look at him, there was such a jam in the two blocks between the platform and the street car I was passing in."

"It's the American spirit, I tell you, that'll sow these Asiatics. The American doesn't know how to quail before man, woman or devil."

"That's right. Say—here's where I get out—will you run over to the house this evening? Just a little game, you know—25-cent limit."

"Gee, I'd like to, old man, but, you know, Mrs. Bottlecork——"

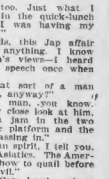
"Too bad. Well, goodby."

"Goodby."

"IF"

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.



WIXT what thou art and what thou would'st be let
No "if" arise on which to lay the blame.
Man makes a mountain of that puny word.
But like a blade of grass before the scythe
It falls and withers when a human will,
Stirred by creative force, sweeps toward its aim.

Thou will be what thou would'st be. Circumstance
Is but the toy of genius. When a soul
Burns with a God-like purpose to achieve
All obstacles between it and its goal
Must vanish like the dew before the sun.

"If" is the motto of the dilettante
And idle dreamer; 'tis the poor excuse
Of mediocrity. The truly great
Know not the word or know it but to scorn.
Else had Joan of Arc a peasant died,
Uncrowned by glory and by men unsung.

Suffragettes and the Treatment They Get

By Winifred Black

TWENTY women were seriously hurt in a mob in London on Wednesday. They were suffragettes trying to force their way into the House of Commons, where they had no business and were not wanted. A mob gathered, and in the fight the suffragettes were jostled and pushed, and some of them badly injured.

Well, what of it?

You can't have your cake and eat it, too. You can't make an omelette without breaking an egg, and if you are determined to eat green watermelon, why, the best thing you can do is to pay the doctor's bills cheerfully, at any rate.

Women who want the rights of men will have to learn that with every right goes a responsibility. I believe in women having a right to work for a living.

Let them dig ditches for wages if they want to, but when they are through digging the ditches they must expect to find their hands rough.

I know a little girl who horrified the neighbors by running out on the front porch clad only in her little pink petticoat.

When her mother looked shocked and said, "Why, is this my nice little girl?" the baby stamped her foot and said, "No, it isn't. I am tired of being nice and I'm going to be naughty, just as naughty as I can be, and have the fun of it."

But when that same little girl took cold from the excessive circulation of fresh air on the front porch she said she thought the doctor who gave her medicine was a horrid thing.

That little girl's views on women are after all! We want to have all the rights in the world and get out of all the responsibilities.

I lived in Colorado and I never saw a woman suffragist in our life who liked to stand up in the street car out there any better than her simple sister who would rather be protected than attacked.

That story from London would be pathetic if it wasn't so funny. Those poor women are so bound and determined to stand on an equal footing with men that they are willing to jump down from their comfortable pedestals and go to picking their way through the gutters to "get even."

I wonder why?

Little Editorials from the People

ONE THEORY OF THE LARCHMONT DISASTER

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish to call to your attention a very regrettable habit that prevails among the officers of most coasting steamers. They will hold along on a course and then suddenly dart across a sailing vessel's bow as though to see how close they can come without hitting.

An officer on a sailing vessel, when he sees a steamer or other vessel ahead, will look to his lights the first thing. Then he wonders why the steamer doesn't alter her course, or if they are asleep aboard of her. He doesn't dare to change his course, because it is the steamer's place to give way, and if a collision resulted he would be held to be at fault. Then, when the officer on the sailing vessel thinks it is all up, the steamer sheers across his bow, and he imagines he can hear the steamer people chuckling after the race he has had.

I believe there are few schooner people but what would bear witness to what I have said.

It looks to me as though this recent terrible disaster had resulted from something similar. It looks as though the Larchmont had attempted to cross the schooner's bow, without getting sufficient heed to the speed the schooner would be making with a strong beating wind.

Then, when they saw their mistake, they tried to haul in short again by putting their wheel aport. If they had not put their wheel aport they would have given Captain Haley a chance to luff, and the result would have been a glancing blow that might have resulted only in temporary disablement at most.
